

RCIS Registered Critical Insurance Specialist

January 20, 2010

Dear Mark Halpern;

As you may know we have been compiling and designing the first Critical Illness Insurance Specialist designation RCIS – Registered Critical Insurance Specialist based on the incredible amount of intellectual capital we have accumulated on the topic of CI. As a speaker taking part in our world conferences your presented topic was chosen to be included in the course. Congratulations!

The first students have received their RCIS course books, which include your topic and your bio and there have been rave reviews! George Goulet, 14 time member of MDRT's top of the table says, "I started the RCIS program this week. You and your team have done a great job on the text. I am really enjoying it. I had one of my team members sign up this week as well. I have 5 others working on their licensing. Once done I will encourage them to complete the RCIS as part of their continuing education".

The RCIS designation is a dynamic body of work that will have future editions with updated industry information. As a contributor, you are welcome to send updates that pertain to your subject area for possible inclusion in future editions or if you have any published works that apply to the C I field please send us information regarding the published work as we may include it as 'suggested reading' for the course. If you have a website please feel free to display the RCIS link, it will highlight your contribution to the course. <http://www.criticalinsurance.org/ciic/ProfessionalResourceCentre/RCISDesignation/tabid/89/Default.aspx>

Make sure to list your involvement in the RCIS course on your CV, as your work is something to be very proud of! Please let us know if you have any questions or concerns.
